Chapter 1 by Raven Larkin

The world shifts once in every person's life, from realising your destiny, finding your true love to losing the person closest to your heart. The feeling of the world shifting can come in many different forms: reality becoming clearer, like your perception changing or your heart feeling like it's been wrenched from your chest and shattered in front of your very eyes. You can't imagine what your shift is going to be until it happens. Some people never even realise and live their lives thinking that something is going to change because they don't accept their shift.

These aren't the only shifts of course. The shift that happens day to day multiple times in a person's life are the shifts of the heart. From philia and storge to agape and eros.
